NOTICE OF LAWSUIT AGAINST UNITED STATES

1. INTRODUCTION

Federal employees who were declared “excepted” employees (sometimes referred to in the media as “essential” employees) during the partial government shutdown in October 2013 have sued the United States in the United States Court of Federal Claims. They contend that the Fair Labor Standards Act (“FLSA”) required the Government to pay them and other excepted employees a minimum wage and overtime compensation on their regularly scheduled paydays for work performed during the shutdown. They claim that the Government violated the FLSA by not paying many FLSA non-exempt employees minimum or overtime wages for work performed October 1-5, 2013 on their regularly scheduled paydays.

You were sent this Notice because the parties believe that you may meet all five conditions to participate in this lawsuit. You are eligible if, between October 1 and October 5, 2013:

- a. you were a federal employee; and
- b. you were classified as “non-exempt” under the FLSA; and
- c. you were deemed an “excepted” employee;¹ and
- d. you worked for any amount of time between October 1 and October 5, 2013; and
- e. you were not paid for work performed October 1-5, 2013 on your regularly scheduled payday.

However, if you are disqualified under one of these conditions, then you are not eligible to participate.

This notice informs you how your rights under the FLSA may be affected by this lawsuit and of the procedure for participating in this lawsuit, if you are eligible to participate and choose to do so.

2. THE COURT’S DECISION ON THE GOVERNMENT’S MOTION TO DISMISS

The Court issued a decision on July 31, 2014 that addresses several of the issues in this case. In summary, the Court concluded:

- The Government violated the FLSA for excepted employees who were classified as non-exempt under the FLSA and were not paid the minimum wage for all hours worked during the week of September 29, 2013 through October 5, 2013 on their regularly scheduled paydays. The minimum wage is $7.25 per hour. [For example, a violation occurred if an employee worked 40 hours that week and received less than $290 ($\7.25×40 hours) on the scheduled payday for the work performed during the week. Any money paid for work performed on Sunday, September 29, or Monday, September 30, would count toward the $290, but any money paid for work performed during the previous week (September 22-28, 2013) would not count toward the $290 even though it was paid in the same paycheck];

- The Government also violated the FLSA for excepted employees who were classified as non-exempt under the FLSA and were not paid for overtime worked during the week of September 29, 2013 through October 5, 2013 on their regularly scheduled paydays; and
- The Government did not violate the FLSA as to excepted employees who were classified as exempt under the FLSA.

The Court has not yet ruled on whether the Government is liable to pay excepted employees “liquidated damages” over and above their regular pay. If awarded, liquidated damages double the amount of minimum wages and overtime wages that should have been paid for work performed during the week of September 29, 2013 through October 5, 2013. Under the FLSA, an employer that violates the FLSA is liable for liquidated damages unless the employer proves that it acted in good faith and had reasonable grounds for believing that its act or omission was not a violation of the FLSA.
